

Educating Globally Competent Students

Juan Cole

Provost's Seminar, November 2, 2010

University of Michigan

Navigating the World

- A global citizen can absorb information about unfamiliar places
- By analogy
- By the expectation of different 'rules of the game'
- By recognition of human universals and cultural specificities
- By attention to motivation and interest and causality
- By seeking out contextualizing information
 - History and demography
 - Markers of identity
 - Grievances
 - Aspirations
- A liberal arts education is a preparation for dealing with a globalizing world